

Interview with founder Dennis Weidner

What's the story behind the e-car sharing fleet?

"Originally, we wanted to bundle the existing e-mobility providers in one app for companies, so that they could allocate to their employees a mobility budget for e-bikes and e-scooters. However, the providers didn't want to participate - and the companies actually asked for electric cars. This is how we became a provider ourselves."

What are your plans for the future, as a mobility player yourself?

"Our focus is on companies and expanding electric mobility with them. We offer quality cars because managers prefer to drive high-quality models - also called 'the motivation fleet'. The car remains a status symbol after all. The behavior of drivers will not change overnight even if we're facing climate change. On the long run, however, we would like to add scooters and bicycles to the offer, as we care about the environment and public health very much as well."
